Creative CV

My name is Evie Holmes and I am a graduate Junior Graphic Designer and Illustrator from Stoke on Trent, living in Liverpool. I have recently graduated university, and I have been working as a freelance artist, and also full-time as a keyworker during lockdown (COVID-19 Pandemic).

My portfolio shows my recent work and some of my university work. All illustrations were either digitally or traditionally drawn by myself, and I used Adobe Photoshop, Illustrator and InDesign to create my designs, alongside other Adobe programmes.

PROFILE -

I am a BA Illustration and MA Art and Science graduate with a background in Graphic Design and digital illustration. I have worked previously as a Junior Graphic Designer as a freelance artist throughout my four years at university, and used to work full-time as a Graphic Designer and Illustrator for a printing company.

SKILLS -

I am creatively driven individual who thoroughly enjoys every aspect of design. I have sufficient Adobe programme skills and I can use both Mac and microsoft desktops. I am a keen drawer and I also enjoy incorporating Illustration both traditional and digital into my artwork.

Petal & Stem Floristry

Petal & Stem was a self directed project that I created to show my branding design skills and to create a market place website that was responsive on all website devices. Using Adobe programmes I designed a sleek and simplistic website along with a logo and branding. I was very inspired by antique florist logos and Victorian styled artwork/illustration to be used throughout the project.

The Nature of Healing Magazine Spread

I created this magazine spread to incorporate font and layout along side digital illustration as an editorial project. The illustrations were created by firstly hand drawing them on paper, then colouring and editing them in illustrator. I create a vector drawing of the design and then take it into photoshop to add details as a high resolution raster drawing. I arranged the magazine spread in InDesign.

The Nature of Healing

In sponsorship with the Outdoor Minds Organisation.

'Nature therapy and rehabilitation programme centres on the rise as the UK public finds grounding solistice in nature this summer in the great out doors'.

Recently, a group of about a dozen researchers (including the authors of this paper) has been studying the physiological effects of grounding from a variety of perspectives. This research has led to more than a dozen studies published in peer-reviewed journals. While most of these pilot studies involved relatively few subjects, taken together, the research has opened a new and promising frontier in inflammation research, with broad implications for prevention and public health. The findings merit consideration by the inflammation research community, which has the means to verify, refute, or clarify the interpretations we have made thus far.

These applications are connected to the Earth via a cord inserted into a grounded wall outlet or attached to a ground rod placed in the soil outside below a window. For the footwear applications, a conductive plug is positioned in the shoe sole at the ball of the foot, under the metatarsals, at the acupuncture point known as Kidney 1. From a practical standpoint, these methods offer a convenient and routine, user-friendly approach to grounding or earthing. They can also be used in clinical situations, as will be described in the section entitled Summary of findings to date.

Never turn down an opportunity to go outside and embrace nature.

The Anatomical Female (Undergraduate Final Project)

For my final illustration project in 2019, I created a project that focused on the female anatomy. The project was inspired by historical Victorian paper anatomy dolls, a teaching resource used that was based around the male anatomy. I created illustrations of the female body in the same style as the Victorian books. The illustrations are based around a 'modern female', so the female figure is shown with hair dye, piercings, stretch marks and make up. The illustrations were firstly hand drawn. I then recreated them as vector illustrations in Adobe Illustrator, and then I rearranged in Adobe InDesign.

The Wonky Veg Box

Wonky Veg Box Veg box is a monthly subscription box of wonky, imperfect or rejected vegetables. This project was a self directed project that involved hand drawn illustration and digital design. that The box aims to positively impact the food industry who often throw out vegetables that are the wrong size or shape. I created posts/advertisement designs for the branding of the subscription box including a logo. I wanted the produce to look organic and Eco friendly to the customer. The logo I kept simplistic, adding a carrot motif to the end design.

The Brown Betty Tea Room Menu

The Brown Betty Tea Room project was a self directed brief for a prototype cafe situated in Stoke on Trent, based around the famous Brown Betty teapot. The cafe pays tribute the history of the teapot and all of its greatness within the Stoke-on-Trent area. I created the logo based on the teapots rounded shape and colour, and did so by using an enlarged Serif B. I took inspiration from the classic Victorian logos that play with decorated display fonts and illustrated decorations. This kept a historical theme to the design, however the logo still sits nicely on digital screens and in print because of it's weight and boldness.

ITwitcher App

ITwitcher App is an Apple and Android App prototype designed to help wildlife lovers share their favourite bird and nature discoveries with other explorers. The App helps identify over 5000 Mammal, insect and bird species by simply taking a photograph with your mobile camera. Photos and videos can also be shared on your news feed and can be followed by others using the App. Share features include sharing the location that the photo was taken so other users can travel to the same location to capture the same sceneries and wildlife. I illustrated the drawings by hand using acrylic paint.
